

3.2.1 Sharing Snaps Privately with Selected Contacts

Once you have finished creating a snap, one way to share it is with the contact(s) of your choice. To do this, tap the send button marked by a green circle, as shown in Figure 8. A list of your mutual friends will be displayed. Tap the name(s) of the contact(s) to whom you want to send the snap, then press the send button. In this case, if you send your snap to multiple people, each one of them can see that you have sent them a snap, but they will not know that you have sent the same snap to others. However, if you want to create a group conversation in which everybody can send snaps and know that others have seen them, you will want to create a group chat. To do this, tap the New Group button located at the top-right corner of the screen containing the list of contacts, as indicated by the orange circle in Figure 8. Then, select the contacts whom you want to include in the group conversation. Once you send your snap to the selected contacts, a new group conversation will be created, and everybody in it will be able to send snaps to everyone else in the group for as long as they are allowed or choose to remain in the group.

In the example snap shown in Figure 8, I sent my snap to Ming Wei Hung. Did you notice the filled red arrow underneath Ming Wei Hung's name? You may have also noticed more red arrows farther down the list, but these red arrows are empty instead. Not only are there red icons and arrows, but there also blue icons and chat bubble icons. The arrow signifies a sent snap, while a chat bubble icon indicates a received snap. The color indicates the type of snap sent or received. "Chat" is another word for a snap that contains only text (no photos or video).

Figure 9: The different icons indicating the status of sent or received snaps. A color we have not discussed yet in this document is the green arrow. Snapchat contains a special feature called Snapcash that allows contacts to send each other real money.

Source: <https://www.businessinsider.com/what-snapchats-color-icons-mean-2015-11>

3.2.2 Sharing Snaps Publicly with Stories

You have just created a well-made, memorable snap that you want all your contacts (and perhaps even the worldwide public) to view anytime for the next 24 hours. The “Stories” functionality of Snapchat allows users to create a series of snaps as chronological content that can be viewed by a chosen audience, whether it is a user’s entire contact list or the worldwide Snapchat public.

To add a snap to your Story, tap the Add to Story button marked by a purple circle in Figure 10. Pressing this button will automatically post your snap to your Story. Tap the buttons marked by turquoise circles to view your Story, as demonstrated in the right image of Figure 10. The number of users who viewed your snap is displayed in the bottom left hand corner of the screen. Tap the “Views” button to see a list of users who have viewed your snap. If you only want certain contacts to view a particular Story snap, press the “+ Private Story” button. Then, from the list of contacts, select the friends to whom you want your snap to be accessible for 24 hours. If you want to change the audience of your public story, press the vertically arranged three dots in the right hand side of the turquoise box. Select “Story Settings” and configure your audience: Everyone, Friends Only, or Custom. You can save your Story snaps into your Memories (which will be discussed in the next section) using the button located to the left of the Add to Story button.

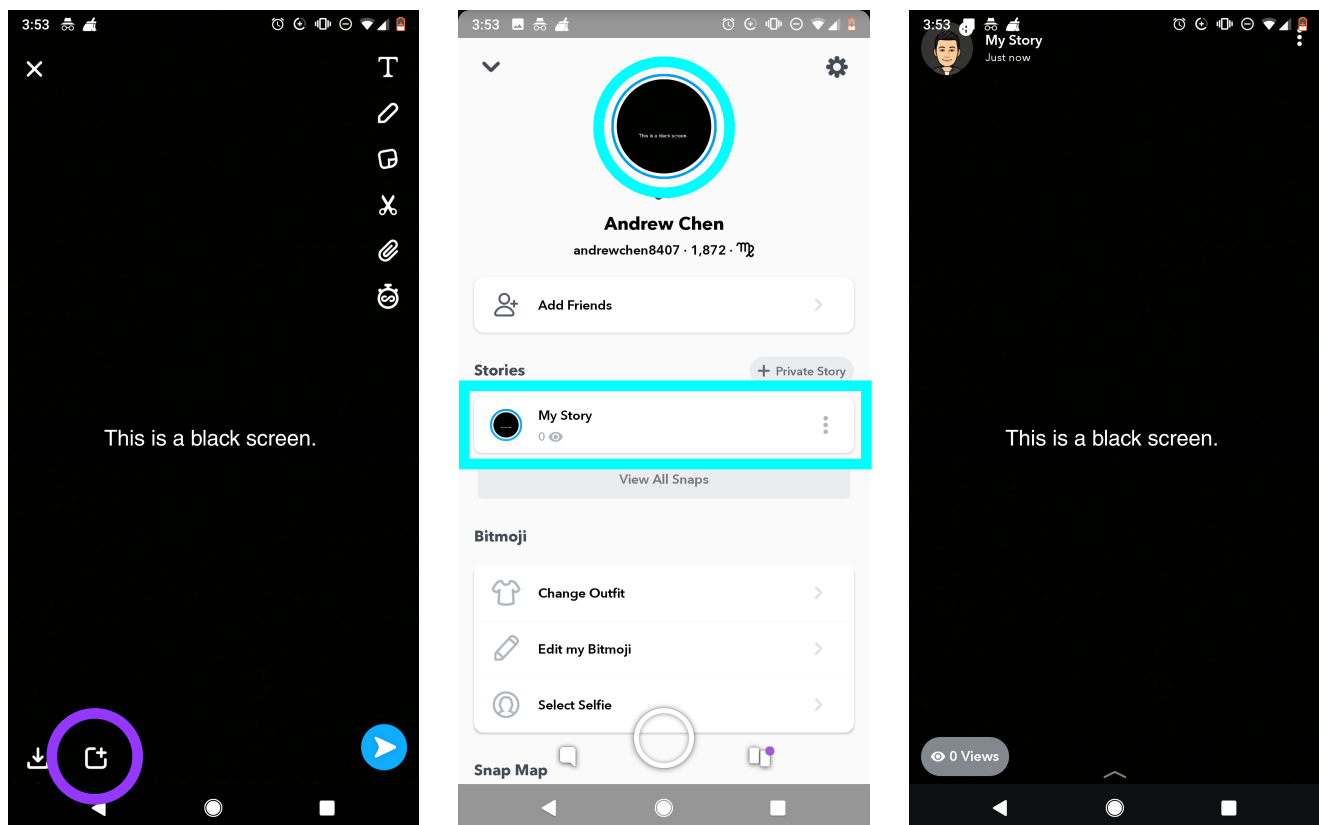

Figure 10: Sharing a snap with a chosen audience using Snapchat Stories.

3.3 Viewing Friends' Stories and Discover

You can view the Stories of your friends by clicking on their Story icons, which appear as circular snippets of their photos/videos enclosed by thin purple circles. A Snapchat feature known as “Discover” displays curated content distributed by companies, franchises, and other major organizations around the world that use Snapchat. The aforementioned organizations connected to Snapchat creates snaps that advertise, promote, and/or solicit content that you can view. These snaps are essentially the Snapchat Stories of the organizations.

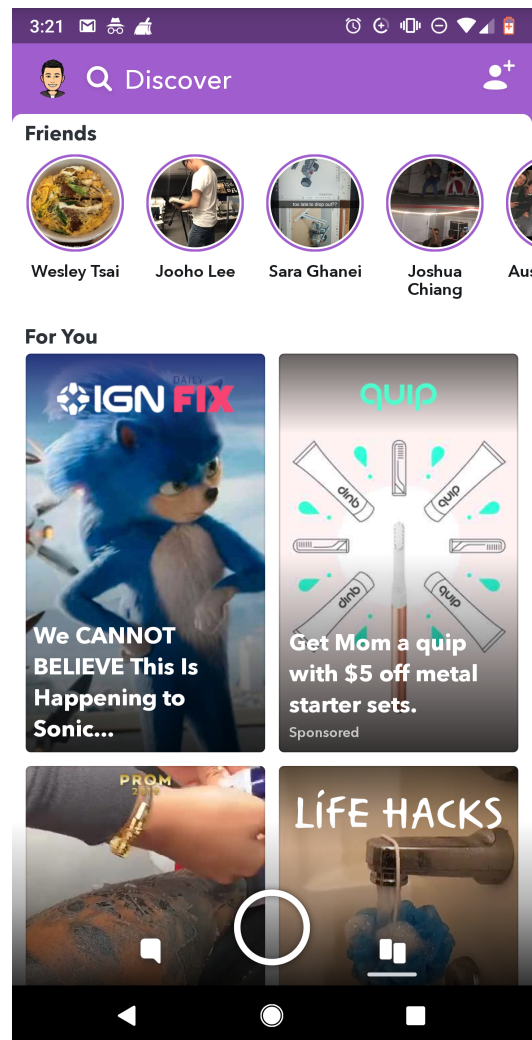

Figure 11: Viewing other friends' Stories and Discover, a feature that lets you view content published by major organizations.

3.4 Memories

Once you finish sending a snap privately, you will be unable to recover it, unless (one of) your recipient(s) takes a screenshot of it. To avoid this, tap the Save to Memories button marked by the yellow circle as shown in Figure 12. The snap will be permanently saved into a specially allocated Snapchat photo album in your camera storage, which can be viewed in the Snaps section of the Memories screen (Screen 7). You can also view the camera roll portion of your internal camera storage by swiping left (thereby navigating to the screen at the right of the Snaps Memories screen).

In the Memories section, you can select a previously saved snap or an existing image in your camera roll and send it as a multimedia message to a contact of your choice. Select the snap or image you want to send and then press the triangular send button at the bottom right hand corner of the screen (similar to how you would normally send a snap).

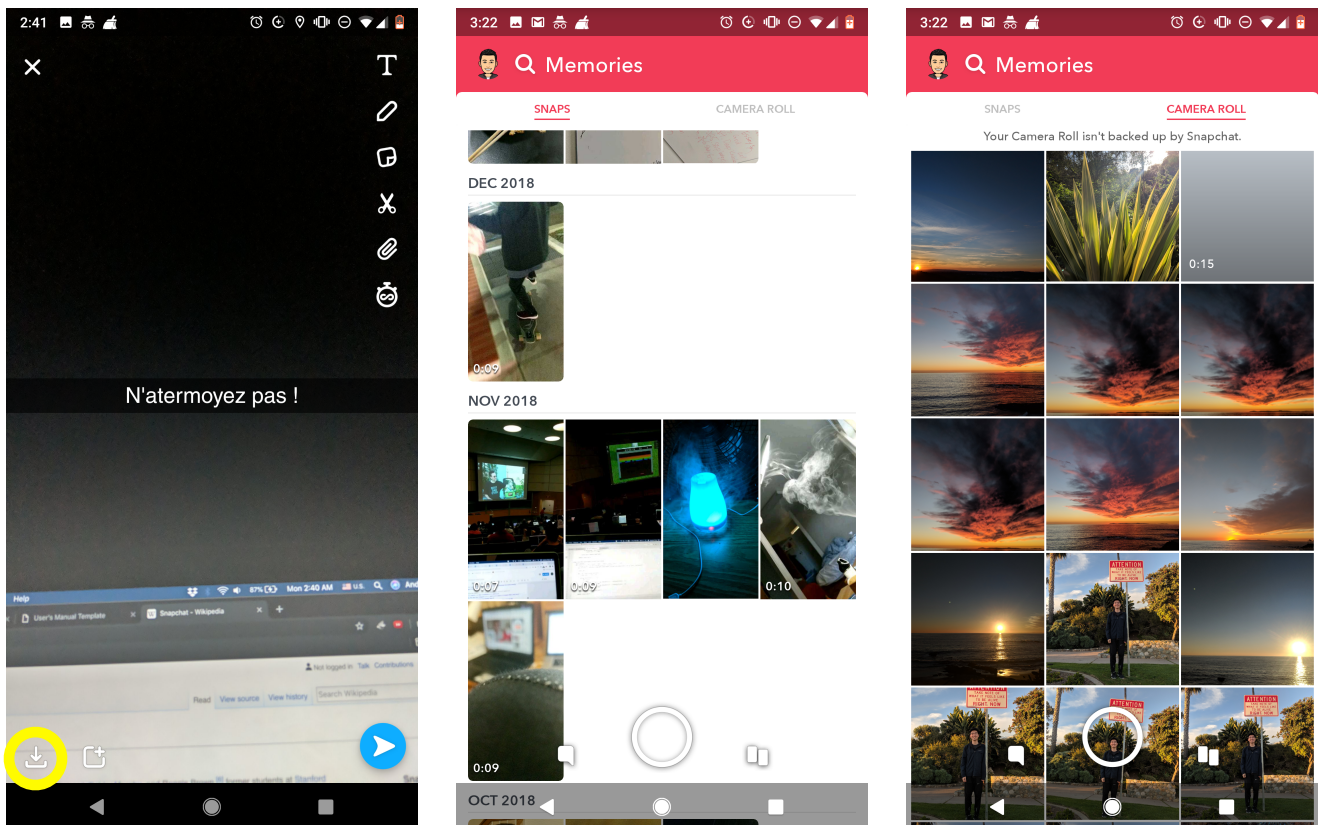

Figure 12: Viewing saved snaps and camera roll images in the Memories section.